As Associate Vice President of Harvard University, where he directs the Office of Public Affairs and Communications (HPAC) and the Office of Governmental Relations (OGR), Kevin has a broad portfolio, and oversees all of the issues facing one of the largest research universities in the world with respect to the local, state, and federal government. He works closely with Harvard faculty and Congress as well as the various federal agencies (DOE, NIH, FDA, NSF) and has handled issues ranging from human embryonic stem cell policy, federal research funding, drug development and approval, environmental and energy policy, intellectual property law, venture capital, and technology licensing. Kevin was also formerly Chief of Staff to current United States Senator Ed Markey (D-MA). When Drew Faust goes to Washington, Kevin's office is the one that sets up meetings with members of Congress, etc.
